

separation deflection potential variation analytical characteristics diameter curvature displacement equations thickness surfaces newtonian discussed parameter supported turbulent influence incidence properties expansion frequency transonic performance accuracy transfer conditions investigated arbitrary increased revolution procedure presented aircraft development downstream procedure including transverse boundary aerodynamic pressures parameters cylinders experiment condition injection velocities profiles condition viscosity velocity solutions coefficients developed expressions stagnation subjected predicted measurements functions gradient approximately supersonic compressible roughness direction longitudinal interference important cylinder equilibrium propeller analysis cylinder stresses determine numerical constant experiments atmosphere theories hypersonic technique stability derivatives reynolds agreement determined rectangular distributions structure coefficient axisymmetric comparison practical unsteady